His plan of operations was about as follows: He in some way knew there was a large amount of money going through on this train, and, being an old conductor, knew best how to make an entrance into the car. He chose the west door for his operations, and did the work of saving the purses of the door while the train was in motion. The noise of the train prevented the noise of the saw from being heard. The aperture made would easily admit a man. Knocking out the panels when the time had come was but a few moments' work, and springing to where the route agent sat with his back toward him the robber had already taken place. It is thought he had accomplices, and that the intention was either to kill or disable the route agent, then throw the money safe off the train, when it would be carried off by the others. H. G. Brinkley has lived in this city for eight or ten years past, and has always been highly respected, and was thought to be strictly honest. His death, and the manner thereof, causes great excitement in the city. He leaves a wife and two children—a girl aged 16 and a young boy. When the news was first told his wife the scene was heart-rending, the wife appearing crazy with grief. The wounds of G. H. Price are not serious, both being fortunately flesh wounds, and did not prevent him from seeing his car safely to Crestline, Ohio. The body of Brinkley was brought back to Lima, Ohio, where an inquest was held, and from there it will be brought to his home in this city for burial. He was a member of the Conductors' Brotherhood, and also of the Independent Order of Red Men.

Mass State Temperance Convention.
The second Mass Temperance Convention of the State of Indiana, under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the State, is hereby called to assemble in the First Baptist church, in the city of Indianapolis, at 2 o'clock P. M. on Wednesday June 9, 1875, to continue throughout Thursday and one half of Friday, June 10th and 11th. Believing that the temperance question has become one of paramount importance in the church, Sabbath school, in legislation and in society, and that the evils of intemperance can only be suppressed by the combined moral forces and powers of law in the State, it has been determined by the Executive Committee to invite all churches, Sabbath schools, and temperance organizations to send representatives, and to ask members and ex-members of the State Legislature and National Congress, ministers of the Gospel, lawyers, physicians, teachers, and all men and women in Indiana who deplore the evils of intemperance, to come to this Convention and assist in devising measures which, with the blessing of God, shall ultimately result in its suppression. The citizens of Indianapolis tender their hospitality to those who may attend the convention. Railroad arrangements will be announced in the Indianapolis papers on Monday, May 24th.

A committee of arrangements will receive visitors at the Third Presbyterian Church, on Illinois street opposite the Academy of Music, between the hours of 8 A. M. and 1:30 P. M. on Wednesday June 9th, and assign them to their homes. A committee of gentlemen wearing white badges will meet them at the depot during the same hours. The Illinois street cars leave the west end of the depot every few moments, passing the Third Church, which is five squares distant. Persons arriving during the night or on early trains can find temporary accommodations at reduced rates at the National Hotel or Spencer House opposite the Depot. Those arriving after the opening of the convention will report at First Baptist church. Newspapers throughout the state are respectfully requested to publish this circular.

Mrs. Z. G. WALLACE, President. Mrs. M. M. FINCH, Secretary. Women's Christian Temperance Union of the State of Indiana. Indianapolis, May 5, 1875.

Fatal Accident.

Tuesday evening between five and six o'clock, the wood and gravel train on the P. Ft. W. & C. railroad came in from the East, and just as they were nearing the depot in this city, and the speed of the train was slackened, one of the laborers named Matthew Keelon fell from the car, which was at the tail of the train, and was run over. The wheels passed over his shoulder and neck, and nearly severed his head from his body. Death must have been instantaneous. He was 40 years old and leaves a wife and six children.

It was not considered necessary to hold an inquest over the body.

Deceased was buried yesterday morning with the ceremonies of the Catholic church.

INWOOD, May 11th, 1875.

—Prof. N. G. Hunter of Rochester, was in town last week visiting friends.

—Dr. L. Barr and Wm. Cook, of Argos, paid us a flying visit Saturday.

—We recently had the pleasure of visiting the Lodge of the P. of H. of this place. They have a real tasty hall and the order seems in a flourishing condition, numbering over one hundred members.

—Inwood Mills have been leased to Mr. D. L. Grossman, who intends taking immediate possession. Mr. G. comes highly recommended as a practical miller. He has leased the property for three years, with the privilege of retaining it five.

—The I. O. of R. M. busily engaged in erecting their new building. The upper portion of the building is designed for a hall for the use of the order, while the lower part is to be used as an office by Mr. Lee.

—Mr. Budd Mattingly was in town Saturday visiting friends and looking after the general interests of the Mirror.

—We submit to military authority and stand corrected—since "Major Star" informs us Inwood will have a "spell." We hope the spell will be a success and should the major fear for the result we will engage to extricate our Webster from the dust and cobwebs, and hoist our colors in behalf of Inwood and the cause.

—We are pleased to see Inwood represented through the Mirror, and hope to have the pleasure of a shake with the Major. We hope he will bear in mind that a battle scared veteran is supposed to be brave and heroic, and to this end we challenge him to social elixir chat.

From thence we drove to Inwood, where we had the pleasure of meeting several old acquaintances; among whom were E. O. Williams and family, Dr. Reynolds, and Dr. J. T. Goucher and family—we were made the recipient of the hospitalities of the latter, where we did ample justice to the victuals placed before us.

—We omitted in our correspondence last week, to mention the removal of Mr. Goucher from this place to Inwood; where he has located with a view to practicing medicine, and where we hope he may meet with success equal to his most sanguine expectations, and doubt not that he will, being possessed of the necessary qualifications; courtesy, energy & ability.

—Dr. Goucher & lady made us a very pleasant call yesterday.

They report fine prospects for wheat throughout southern Ill., & some parts of Missouri; especially in the vicinity of St. Louis. They found the timber along the south line of the State, better than they had anticipated; the high lands covered with forests of Ash, Walnut and poplar; the low lands with a dense growth of cypress. A ROBBER SALTED.
A Life and Death Struggle in an Express Car.

THE AGENT WOUNDED AND THE ROBBER SHOT DEAD.

Fort Wayne, Ind., May 7.—The following are the particulars of a bold attempt to rob the Pacific express east on the P. F. W. & C. railroad at 2 o'clock this morning by H. G. Brinkley: When the train had proceeded some fourteen miles east of Lima a masked man entered the west end of the express car and, pulling a revolver, called to route agent G. H. Price to surrender, and presented a revolver close to his ear. Price threw up his left arm as a shield, and sprang from his seat, when the robber fired, the ball entering Price's wrist. The latter sprang for his revolver, when the robber again fired, the ball entering the left shoulder of Price. The latter then wheeled on the robber and fired, hitting him in the forehead, directly over the left eye, killing him. Price then pulled the bell rope and stopped the train. The train men made a thorough search for accomplices, and finding the would be robber dead, started the train and went as far as Crestline, before any attempt was made to discover who the robber was. The mask he wore was of black cambric, of unusual length, reaching from his head to his waist, where it was secured by a string around his body. It was also fastened around the neck by a rubber band, and had two eye-holes. The features of the robber were entirely concealed. On removal of the mask it was found to be H. G. Brinkley, a former conductor of the road, and who had been discharged but two weeks.

His plan of operations was about as follows: He in some way knew there was a large amount of money going through on this train, and, being an old conductor, knew best how to make an entrance into the car. He chose the west door for his operations, and did the work of saving the purses of the door while the train was in motion. The noise of the train prevented the noise of the saw from being heard. The aperture made would easily admit a man. Knocking out the panels when the time had come was but a few moments' work, and springing to where the route agent sat with his back toward him the robber had already taken place. It is thought he had accomplices, and that the intention was either to kill or disable the route agent, then throw the money safe off the train, when it would be carried off by the others. H. G. Brinkley has lived in this city for eight or ten years past, and has always been highly respected, and was thought to be strictly honest. His death, and the manner thereof, causes great excitement in the city. He leaves a wife and two children—a girl aged 16 and a young boy. When the news was first told his wife the scene was heart-rending, the wife appearing crazy with grief. The wounds of G. H. Price are not serious, both being fortunately flesh wounds, and did not prevent him from seeing his car safely to Crestline, Ohio. The body of Brinkley was brought back to Lima, Ohio, where an inquest was held, and from there it will be brought to his home in this city for burial. He was a member of the Conductors' Brotherhood, and also of the Independent Order of Red Men.
